Zsolt Matraberci as the CEO of Nosiboo manages the business's daily operation in finances, marketing and sales areas and is also responsible for making and executing strategic decisions. After spending sixteen years as an architect and interior designer at smaller size companies, in 2013 Zsolt partnered up with his best friend, Walter Streitmann to establish an innovative, family friendly baby care company. The idea of Nosiboo was born after these two engineers became fathers and started dealing with sleepless nights when the infants came on board.

Zsolt is extremely passionate about premium quality and design-oriented innovations, so their company not only offers appealing, next generation products but also understands the issue of a modern family.

Zsolt has a son and in his free time he enjoys gastronomy, wine tasting and traveling.

Walter Streitmann with both Engineer and Economist background and over fifteen years of experience as an entrepreneur in interior design is responsible for R&D, manufacturing and sourcing at Nosiboo.

With his passion for continuous development and family centered focus, his aim is to create a well-established international brand within the family health and safety area.

Walter is a father of two little girls and in his spare time he enjoys traveling, exploring new cultures and gastronomy.

As the accomplishment of the dedicated work of this talented duo, the Nosiboo Pro Nasal Aspirator was awarded the Red Dot Design Award in 2014 in the medical device category and in 2016, was nominated and awarded by the German Design Council due to its unique and outstanding design.
